

COPELANDS UPDATE

Following a suspension of work on the site (due to the pandemic), we are delighted that it's all go again but with a few necessary changes. As we go to print, social distancing is still in place which has meant a reduced number of people on site. Thankfully, difficulties with accessing some supplies is easing and good progress is once again being made.

As can be seen from these recent images, the building is coming together well with the aesthetics now being addressed. The painters are in and the joiners are starting to look at the fit-out. The gas supply is going in over the next few weeks and plans for the landscaping have been confirmed. The interior design of the whole building has also been confirmed and you can get a feel for what it will look like from the images of the Mood Boards (overleaf).

Away from the site, work is ongoing to prepare for the eventual opening, which is currently planned for early 2021. Recruitment for staff will now commence later in the year while those who have expressed an interest in residency (either for themselves or for a loved one) are being kept up to date with developments. We are also working on a new brochure and website while others are putting together induction packs for staff and other required official documentation.

Fundraising continues in order to cover the costs of the internal fixtures and fittings and a huge thanks is due to those who have already donated, whether in the very early days of our fundraising campaign or right up to recent weeks. It has all been vital to the fulfilment of the vision and each donation, of whatever amount, will have contributed to the final outcome. To find out more about how you can still help, please see overleaf.
